The Woman

I help people see beyond the limits of their circumstances.
Everything I do is merely a vessel to help others find their light.

The road to success has been anything but smooth. I have always loved writing. As a child, it was a way to escape and express myself. But I wasn't a great student. I didn't learn like my classmates, and I fell behind in school, failing math, science, and English. So, when I said I wanted to be a writer, the adults around me said to be more "realistic." I ended up in a college program that didn't fulfill me, and I sunk into a deep depression and had crippling anxiety that nearly cost me my life. On the day of my last college exam, I tore up the paper and walked out. In my early twenties, a time when most people were flourishing and discovering their vision, I was a depressed college drop out with a spotty high school transcript, an unhealthy amount of self-doubt and fear, and the heavy burden of other people's expectations and limitations.

The first and most important thing I did to overcome those challenges was to raise my hand and ask for help. I sought therapy to support my mental wellness, and found mentors who saw my potential and invested in my growth. And while I never went back to school, I turned my whole life into a classroom designed just for me - this is the catalyst that birthed the work I am so passionate about.

I'm a woman who has fought for her dreams and won. However, the "it" factor that resonates across every part of my brand is the heart I bring to everything I do. I am genuinely invested in other people's success, and I will always go above and beyond to help them achieve it.

Everything I Couldn't Tell My Mother

It is a coming-of-age story for any woman who has ever questioned her sexual maturity and readiness, stayed silent at a time when she should have spoken up or accepted treatment that was less than what she deserved.

Aaliyah Panarese is the teenage daughter of successful, overprotective parents who want the best for her but rarely consider her hopes and dreams. Under the matriarchal rules of her abusive mother, Aaliyah is expected to, without question, follow in her footsteps and attend law school after she graduates from high school. Frustrated and too cowardly to express her dreams of becoming a writer, she escapes life's harsh realities by journaling heartfelt letters to her mother inside a diary, hoping that one day they will be the keys to rebuilding trust and strengthening the emotional connection that is lacking between them.

In a desperate attempt to find her voice, and feel accepted and loved, she befriends Stacy, Tonja and Manny—the most rebellious girls at her school. Aaliyah follows the crowd, breaks her parents' rules and is quickly thrown into a battlefield marked with peer pressure, self-loathing, sexual discovery and broken friendships. Her journey takes dramatic twists and turns while delivering a cautionary tale that is grounded in the reality of what it is to be a teenager in today's instant-access generation.

The Mentor

I think empowering women is important and it's a huge part of my brand. Many of us often need to be reminded that we don't need to play it small or safe to make other people comfortable. But I think that "women's empowerment" can sometimes be misunderstood because it's been watered down by this idea that it's all about brunches and cute initiatives. Real women's empowerment looks like mentors giving women practical advice to help them grow in their careers. It looks like sponsors making introductions, giving referrals, and creating opportunities for the women they support. It looks like companies creating programs and spaces to help the women who work for them thrive. Empowerment isn't just about making women feel good. It has to give them real power to create success stories for themselves.

Having experienced the value of mentorship firsthand, I believe that mentoring others is the greatest contribution I can make to the world. I founded New Girl on the Block to empower other young women to live their dreams and defy every limit that has ever been imposed on them. As a mentor and sponsor, I realize that my success and the success of my mentorship program is directly tied to the growth and development of the next generation of leaders. This drives me to continuously seek out new ways to empower and equip my mentees to reach their full potential and create a legacy that leaves a positive mark on the world.

I'm a sharp business woman, and I operate for success, but the "it" factor that resonates across every part of my brand is the heart I bring to everything I do. I am genuinely invested in other people's success and I will always go above and beyond in whatever I do to help them achieve it.

Pauleanna is one of the most brilliantly gifted writers I've encountered! When building my Mentorship brand a few years ago, our paths connected and she's been instrumental in creating copy for marketing collateral materials including web content, bio's, one-sheets, proposal decks etc and Pauleanna quickly became my go to copy editor who reviews all of my speeches. I have never met anyone who captures my heart, voice, tone and spirit so perfectly. Pauleanna is detailed, a thorough researcher, consummate professional who adds tremendous value, meets deadlines and always delivers par excellent work. - Ivy McGregor, The IVY Inc.

Pauleanna is a magnetic and insightful speaker. Sitting on a content marketing panel in my social media class at Ryerson University, Pauleanna fielded each and every question with poise and humility. Drawing on relevant examples from her storied career, she provided context (and humour) to the best practices she generously shared with eager students. Following the panel, Pauleanna was surrounded by a throng of young fans, no doubt inspired by the immense value that was delivered in such a remarkably short period of time. - Hamza Khan, Lecturer, RTA School of Media, Ryerson University

I had the pleasure of working with Pauleanna for a women's empowerment event in Detroit, MI. As a moderator, she is engaging, yet packs the punch when it comes to crafted content. Her questions provoked a higher level of thinking for our audience, positively impacting our overall programming. Her performance is at an elite level and embodies a level of excellence unmatched. -Meagan Ward, CEO, Femology

Pauleanna is hard-working and highly committed to her craft. She demonstrates initiative, intelligence, and creativity. She is always willing to help someone out in the time of need which speaks to her ability to function as a productive member of a team and to project an open, friendly persona to others regardless of their level of expertise. She is a great direct communicator and knows how to raise and discuss common issues and problems in a processual manner. She is the type of individual that you can count on and trust and those traits are exceptional and speak to her character. -Rakia Reynolds, Founder, Skai Blue Media

As a guest of the Communication Studies Students' Association at York University for the PR & Social Media panel has been more than wonderful. She was able to connect and motivate our students. She took the time to meet and personally answer the students' questions. I can definitely say that she inspired our Communication's students with her accomplishments and her professionalism. - Andr anne McKay-Denis, President, Communications Studies Students Association, York University

I've had the pleasure of working with Pauleanna and her team on several projects. I am detail oriented and very meticulous as it relates to how my brand is communicated. Pauleanna and her team blew me away upon delivery. I felt seen and understood as a project management professional, community organizer, & speaker. Articulating who I am, how I see my brand, & the impact that is important to me is one thing, but for Pauleanna and her team to really listen, process, & deliver a polished, cohesive version that can clearly be articulated is a skill that is unmatched. I am truly grateful. - Asya Watkins, Founder, Women of Project Management
